The purpose of this study was to increase awareness and understanding of suicide prevention in a rural county in the State of Florida. Using a qualitative design, data were collected from a focus group of 22 community residents and three semistructured interviews with community mental health clinicians, local media representatives, and mental health administrators. Data were collected during a 3-month period. Participants discussed community and individual needs and services, including culturally relevant interventions, suicide prevention strategies, and strategies to reduce fear and community stigma. All participants desired more training, more information, and more protective mental health services. Cultural interventions, including bullying prevention and suicide prevention, were suggested as viable and valuable additions to the existing services.
