New Business Solutions You can't manage what you don't measure, right? That's the concept behind a new wave of businesses that are starting to provide insight into their operations. EPC Plano, a leader in the mortgage business, is one of them. As the company's services expand, so does the amount of data it collects. Since 2011, EPC Plano has been collecting performance metrics on a monthly basis. The data, which includes amounts paid, cost per service, estimated risk score, and other metrics, is fed into the company's existing data platform, which provides a snapshot of the business on a monthly basis. The tool also allows the firm to analyze trends, identify opportunities, and examine the bottom line, according to co-founder and CEO John Deignan. Deignan and his team can see exactly how the company is doing in terms of margins, as well as where the company should be focusing on revenue growth. The idea behind having these metrics is to not only give management a better view of the business on a monthly basis, but also to help spot potential problems before they become disasters. "A lot of what we do is not measured and we want to be very thoughtful about making sure we know if there's a problem
