It is lightweight, fast and user-friendly. If you use Mozilla Firefox for your browsing needs, then you will have to spend hours of time and effort to make sure you do not miss a single web page. There are times when you may find it convenient to record web pages and other data on your computer, and then you need to find a useful software solution to record Firefox. Since Firefox is not your ordinary web browser, its relevant information can be saved in a file type called "Firefox profiles". This is what makes the app Firefox Data Recorder very convenient. The application is designed to save all the data you enter into the Firefox browser. This includes the content of web pages you visit, form data you fill in, and personal information you enter. After the browser stops running, the data will remain on your computer. The Firefox Data Recorder has a number of useful features, like the ability to save data in a form of HTML files, text files, and other compatible files; a user-friendly interface; and data management functions that let you store the data, and then search for the recorded data files. You can store the files locally, or share the Firefox profile on your favorite online cloud storage platform. You can also control the frequency of data saving so that you are not wasting time looking
